

IDEALS OF A WOMAN

What Men Must be to Win the Sweet Creature.

HE MUST BE NEAT AND CLEAN

Must Show no Weakness of His Own, But be Conveniently Ignorant of Woman's Peculiar Whims.

There is a great deal said of the sort of woman a man considers his ideal. Boys hardly out of their teens talk of the perfect creature they intend to marry. Women say less about it, but in their heart of hearts they every one have some special imaginary hero that they worship year in and year out. A woman seldom marries her ideal; if she did the practical side of life which marriage brings would completely destroy young authors, of whom she has a good number among her friends. She is ever ready to discuss a "character" or a plot with them. She has even been known to help the lame dog over the stile by writing a chapter in a novel which, somehow or other, the author found insuperable difficulty in writing.

Asparagus Omelet.

Boil half a bunch of asparagus and cut the tops and tender part into half-inch lengths; season with a little salt, pepper and butter, and put cascade on the stove to keep warm while the omelet is being made. Beat six eggs, whites and yolks together, with a teaspoonful of milk for each egg; a saltspoonful of salt; and a pinch of white pepper; brown two tablespoomfuls of butter in a frying pan, pour the eggs in, and as soon as it begins to set at the edges turn them up and shake the pan to keep the omelet from sticking; it should be cooked sufficiently in five minutes. Put the asparagus in, double the omelet, and serve immediately on a hot dish.

Her Husband Writes.

Mrs. F. Marion Crawford, wife of the popular novelist whose books occupy a prominent place in American libraries, is the daughter of General Berdan of the famous sharpshooters. She was for every purpose of cleanliness — Pearline. Nothing saves as much work; nothing does as much work. It cleans without corroding, and washes without wear and tear. It does better than any soap, anything that soap can do. Any housekeeper will tell you how cheap it is, but it is so dear to her that she will never give it up.

Never peddled.
